Women Presidential Voters.

There will be a new factor in the next Presidential election that has begun to engage the serious attention of practical politicians, who as a class always hesitate to make serious use of the imaginative faculty of their minds. It is hard for men of this type to realize the full significance of the fact that several million women will vote for Presidential electors in November, complicated as this fact is by the avowed purpose of the women in these States to place their loyalty to suffrage above all personal party predilections. The intimation has been spread abroad through influential sources that the enfranchised women in the West will use the hallot next fall in the way that seems best to them for the furtherance of "votes for women" cause in the so-called unenfranchised States.

This means that each Presidential be judged by several million voters from one angle only, and his qualifications for President estimated solely question of woman suffrage. The enfranchised women of the country are divided among themselves upon such issues as preparedness, the tariff, or political platform.

It is conceivable that in a close chised women's vote might be the decisive factor.
